WEB STUFF TRIVIA

- In 1972, a science fiction writer named David Gerrold wrote a story about a malignant code that spread from one computer to another. First such use of the term, that. He called his story "Virus."
- An estimated 10 million old personal computers are thrown out every year. The count is rising, experts say. They predict 150 million will pile up in this country's landfills by the year 2005.
- HERE